2 . Features of University

History of Nagoya University: Nagoya University was founded in 1871, when the medical school with a hospital was established on the site of a local feudal council building in Nagoya. In April 1939, the university received its charter as Japan's seventh Imperial University. After the Second World War, in the general post-war reform of the nation's educational system, Nagoya University was given a leadership role in the Chubu region, and has grown into one of the foremost national universities in Japan. Currently, Nagoya University, in its totality, has nine faculties, thirteen graduate schools, three affiliated research institutes, and numerous research centers. There are 9,701 undergraduate students, 5981 post-graduate students enrolled and 1,214 overseas students in total from 74 countries in the entire university (as of May 2010). Approximately 3,200 teaching staffs work at the university.

Introduction to Nagoya: Nagoya city, the prefectural capital of Aichi Prefecture, is located in the southwest of the central Japan. With a population of over 2 million, it is the forth-largest city in Japan. Being a core region for Japan's industrial technology, the city is prosperous with, for example, automobile industry represented by Toyota Motor Corporation. The city of Nagoya is also a cultural city with a long history.

3 . Features of Graduate School

The Graduate School of Law (GSL) at Nagoya University is unique from other universities in Japan in that it is engaged in international cooperation for the provision of legal systems in various Asian countries undertaking the transition to a market economy and constitutional and democratic nation-states. In line with this, GSL has been committed to English-taught LL.M. (Comparative Law) Program in Law and Political Science since 1999 and taken in many overseas students, including JDS students from the targeted countries of Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Uzbekistan, Mongolia, Myanmar and China to assist in their training as legal professionals. These students are provided with teaching and research supervision from our academic staff members. Currently there are over 100 overseas students enrolled in our faculty. Fifty of them including 19 JDS students are those who have entered through the Master's program of the "Human Resources Development program to Contribute to the Asian Technical Legal Assistance Projects" for professional training. This program is directed towards persons who will return to their own country after completing the program to be engaged in the reform of their domestic legal and political systems or in the education of the students and civil service staff in the field of law and political science. Today, we are proud to count among our overseas graduates staff of core ministries, counsel in major corporations, active lawyers and progressive academics of the jurisdictions that have enriched our environment through participation in our programs.

4 . Features of the Program

Objective of the Program:

The master's program of the "LL.M. (Comparative Law) Program in Law and Political Science, titled as the "Human Resources Development program to Contribute to the Asian Technical Legal Assistance Projects, aims at fostering human resources capable to contribute to the development of legal systems mainly in Asian countries which have been in the process of transition to a market-oriented model of economics, a democratic system of politics, and a civil society governed by the rule of law. The program provides professional and academic training to those personnel in the Asia-Pacific region who are expected to work for reforming their domestic legal and political systems or to be engaged in educating and training future legal professionals. This has brought twenty overseas students entering each year including JDS fellows.

Overview of the program:

Students enter Nagoya University in October of each year, after being matched with a faculty supervisor, spend the first six months in the program studying Japanese language intensively at the Nagoya University Education Center for International Students (ECIS), along with tutorial from each supervisor and attending introductory courses to Japanese society.

In addition to the regular courses, a non-credit special program will be offered for JDS students during the first six months. This special program involves an introductory course for academic writing in English, which aims at improving skills in writing academic papers in English and a seminar on the "Japanese Society and Law" with an onsite visit to Japanese judiciary institutions in Japan to help develop insights and understandings of legal system in Japan and one study-away trip to Hiroshima is expected to be provided.

After completing the six months of Japanese training, in April of the following year, students formally enroll in the master's program and begin their legal studies in earnest.

Features of the Program:

The features of this program are; 1) provision of a variety of course options from which students may choose; 2) focused instruction in research methods and academic writing, through a suite of Academic Writing courses that run the length of the program in support of the thesis writing process, and 3) individual and specialized tutorials with supervisory professor in the subject area of each candidate, in close coordination with the academic writing courses referred to above.

The distinctiveness of the program is that it is complemented by social activities, student mentorship arrangements, private and public sector internships, language instruction through the Education Center for International Students, annual participation in the Japan Inter-Collegiate Negotiation Competition, and a set of student-driven cross-national seminars (the Peer Support Initiative). These features of our environment reinforce and supplement the opportunities of the traditional academic curriculum in law and politics. Classroom instruction is enriched through course offerings taught by legal staff of major local corporations, by practicing Japanese lawyers, and by reporter with front-line experience in covering both domestic and foreign news for Japanese media organizations. Optional intensive courses offered between terms further supplement the core curriculum.

5 . Necessary Curriculum to Obtain the Degrees

Requirements of obtaining the Degree of Master of Laws (Comparative Law)

To obtain a master degree, students are required both to attend courses including ten credits from the compulsory subjects; Special Research I, Special Research II, and Academic Writing I. Completion of 30 credits of study and writing a Master's thesis in English under the supervision of a member of academic staff are requisites to obtain a master's degree.

Regular courses are conducted in lecture, seminar and practice formats. In seminars, students are expected to prepare a research topic and present their findings to colleagues and faculty. Grades are assessed mainly from presentations and in class discussions. Students in the Masters program may also include credits taught at the neighboring Graduate School of International Development toward the 30 credits required toward the degree. Courses outside the program but within the scope of the candidate's research interests may also be approved, depending on educational and research requirements.

Law Library:

The Law Library placed in our School contains approximately 200,000 volumes of books in the field of law and political science, including approximately 76,000 volumes in foreign languages. An additional 550 Japanese issued periodicals and 330 foreign periodicals of our school are available in the University Central Library. The Law School Library, along with other satellite collections within the University, is covered by OPAC system and, for older books, the comprehensive card catalog housed in the Central Library.

Computerized Service:

Wireless Internet access is available for all students on campus. In our school, all graduate students get free unlimited use of LEXIS-NEXIS, a cutting edge Legal Research database.

The Central Library of Nagoya University:

The Central Library, which processes all library materials and maintains the union catalog of all books in the university, also offers circulation and reference services, including inter-library loan, photocopying, and computer-based information retrieval. In the Central Library building there are approximately 1,000,000 volumes and 20,000 periodicals. Circulation is managed by an ID card system and book detection system. For language education and other educational and research purposes, the Central Library has access to satellite TV channels, including CNN news, CCTVa, and KBSa. The Central Library contains 1,000 reading desks in the open-stack area. Group study rooms, a seminar room, an information corner, and an audio-visual room are also available.

8 . List of faculty members capable of guiding JDS fellows

The main responsibility for the supervision of graduates lies with the supervisor appointed by the Department Faculty Committee. The Department Faculty Committee officially decides supervisors at the outset of the master's program.

(Faculty Members is listed in the accompanying table.)

9 . Message for Applicants

The Masters thesis, supervised by a member of faculty, is a central element of the program, and the research proposal is therefore an important factor in the admissions decision. Strong applications will demonstrate a good base of background knowledge in the intended field of study, focus upon a specific research issue or question, show evidence of progress beyond the mere selection of a topic area, and be tailored to the expertise of potential supervisors.

In preparing the research proposal, applicants should refer to the website of the Graduate School of Law for information on the faculty, and on potential supervisors. Applicants should be aware of Japanese legal or political issues relevant to the proposed research problem, and of any relevant research coming out of Japan in the languages of the applicant.

It bears emphasis that the research proposal should be clear and purposeful. Two years is a short period of time, and applications that show the initial phase of topic identification and problem setting has been cleared will be favored. Note that applications may be rejected on this basis, and that such rejection does not prejudice reapplication, with a more well-focused proposal, in subsequent years.
